

Marvin Melton Bows Out of Governor Race

LITTLE ROCK (AP) — A grim Marvin Melton bowed out of the Arkansas Democratic gubernatorial race Friday saying pressure had been applied to would-be contributors to his campaign fund.

Melton, a Jonesboro farmer-businessman, made what was his second withdrawal announcement at a news conference called Friday afternoon.

In mid-April Melton, near tears, first said he was leaving the campaign because of a lack of financial support. A short time later pledges poured in, he said, until the fund had reached about $40,000.

"But for some reason partially unknown to me," Melton said Friday, "These pledges have dried up. There are indications pressure has been put on these people from certain sources."

The surprise withdrawal of Melton leaves six Democratic gubernatorial hopefuls, including the incumbent Gov. Orval E. Faubus.

A newsman asked Melton if the pressure he referred to was applied by the Faubus administration.

He replied: "There's only one place pressure can come from and that's from people in authority."

And he added, "I don't have to draw you a picture."

Melton's announcement received a mixed reaction from other candidates for governor.

Faubus, happy over the turn of event, predicted he would gain most from the withdrawal. But this was challenged by two others. Both Sid McMath and Kenneth Coffelt differed with the governor.

McMath said at Hot Springs Friday night that already he was receiving telephone calls from Melton supporters. "I welcome their support," he said.

Coffelt, on the other hand, commented, "The truth about it is, at the present time Faubus is wandering in the wilderness."

And he added, "I thought he (Melton) was a strong contender statewide with me for a runoff position."

Melton, who estimated it would cost $150,000 to conduct a successful campaign, told newsmen he was not a wealthy man.

He said he had not been approached by any other candidate about quitting the race nor would he lend his support to any.

Melton reiterated remarks he made in April that the greatest influence in Arkansas politics today is fear, but declined to be specific.

The would-be candidate said he never again would run for "any office higher than constable again."

"I've had the political experience of a lifetime," he allowed.

Number of Red Refugees Drop Sharply

By CONRAD FINK

HONG KONG (AP)—A competent border source said the flow of refugees across the Chinese border into Hong Kong had stopped today and it appeared the Communists had taken positive action to curb the exodus which had sent 60,000 across since May 1.

The source said the Hong Kong border situation "has reverted to normal."

British army troops were starting to withdraw from the border area and preparations were under way to close down the detention camp where captured refugees have been held until they could be returned to Red China.

It was not immediately established what action the Communist authorities and guards had taken on the other side of the border.

Border sources said they had heard no shooting and that all appeared to be orderly and quiet. The main crossing points which the refugees have been using since the big rush began.

During the 24 hours before the refugee flow stopped, the number sneaking across the border dropped drastically, to fewer than 2,000. Days before between 4,000 and 5,000 had been slipping across each day.

There were no reports from the British side of the border to indicate the Communists were getting tough. Chinese villagers near the border continually report hearing gunfire from the Communist side, but officials generally discount these.

There was speculation that the Communists were using force in the hills behind the border, out of sight of British patrols.

Communist loudspeakers were silent today after a full day of broadcasting exhortations to the fleeing Chinese to return to their villages. This nonviolent form of persuasion in a police state had mystified Hong Kong officials.

British officials were pleased at the drop in the refugee flow and hoped it was only the start of a trend that would accelerate. But one official pointed out that in jam-packed Hong Kong even 100 border crossers would have caused concern a month ago.

No hope was held here that Hong Kong's plight would be greatly relieved by President Kennedy's announcement that his government is working to expedite the admission of several thousand Chinese to the United States.

Washington is talking about 19,000 Chinese who have applied for admission to the United States since 1954, the U.S. Consulate said. These are relatively well-to-do Chinese who applied for entrance under normal immigration laws and not the penniless peasants sneaking over in recent weeks.

No Action by Faubus on ESD Workers

By JOHN R. STARR

LITTLE ROCK (AP)—Gov. Orval E. Faubus suggested today that state employees under the federal Hatch Act not accept contributions to his campaign.

Collecting campaign funds for Faubus got three Employment Security Division employees in trouble with the Civil Service Commission in 1960 and the state faces loss of $30,000 in federal funds as a result.

"I think they (employees under the Hatch Act) will be smart enough not to accept contributions this year," Faubus said.

Committee on Highways Name Chief

LITTLE ROCK (AP)—Henry Schneider, engineer of materials and tests for the state Highway Department, was elected chairman of a 13-man highway research committee here Thursday.

Schneider was elected at an organizational meeting addressed by Highway Director F. R. Oliver, John W. Courter, division engineer for the Bureau of Public Roads, and Virgil W. Addison, coordinator of research at the University of Arkansas.

All urged greater attention to research in highway matters. Addison, who was elected vice-chairman, said one of the university's prime functions was conducting research. He said the university would take on whatever tasks the research committee might assign it.

The committee has seven members from the Highway Department staff, four from the university and two from the Bureau of Public Roads. Its financing will come from federal matching funds.

He said the department could spend up to 1½ per cent of its federal funds for planning and research. He said less than one-tenth of one per cent of highway department budgets over the nation now were devoted to research.

For its first project, the committee voted to undertake a study of research in the Highway Department.

Carpenter Tired the Third Round

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP)—In a post-flight debriefing, Project Mercury officials pictured astronaut Malcolm Scott Carpenter as a very tired and possibly confused pilot during his third orbit of the earth.

"He certainly was a different man on this pass than the preceding ones," reported the Kauai, Hawaii, tracking station in a radio hookup late Thursday night among all 17 stations on the worldwide network. It said Carpenter's voice was weak and he sounded tired.

The network debriefing followed several hours after Carpenter was recovered from the Atlantic Ocean after his spacecraft overshoot the intended landing point by 250 miles and he took to a life raft.

The session, a report of which became available to The Associated Press today, also showed:

—A brief radio signal had been received from the capsule after it re-entered the atmosphere and officials knew from this that the craft had survived re-entry. Complete radio blackout had been reported Thursday and left the world hanging for 41 minutes as to whether the capsule might have burned upon re-entry.

—Medical men were concerned about extreme blood pressure and pulse readings from Carpenter during the flight.

—Excessive fuel consumption may have been caused by a faulty gyroscope reference system.

—An erroneous radio signal 226 seconds after launching, while the Atlas was still propelling Carpenter upward, indicated trouble with part of the rocket's hydraulic system and an automatic signal triggered the abort system to pull the capsule away and end the mission. But a backup trigger sensed no trouble and prevented the abort.

Disagreement on Carpenter Orbital Flight

GRAND TURK, B.W.I. (AP)—Was astronaut Malcolm Scott Carpenter confused, preoccupied or simply reflective during his last whirl around the globe? Space officials seem unable to agree on an answer.

As they weighed today this and other questions which arose during the 37-year-old naval officer's thrilling space journey, he had a date to go skindiving with other astronauts off this tiny West Indies island.

Then there were to be more questions about his three-orbit flight, more debriefing, with astronauts John H. Glenn Jr., Walter M. Schirra Jr., Virgil I. Grissom and Leroy Gordon Cooper Jr. joining in the interrogation.

Carpenter himself will have a chance to answer questions about his condition during flight when he returns to Cape Canaveral Sunday for a welcome home celebration and a news conference. On Monday he will fly to his hometown of Boulder, Colo., for another welcome.

The question of Carpenter's condition during his last orbit arose late Thursday night, several hours after he had been plucked from his tiny life raft in the Atlantic 250 miles beyond his target landing area. The 17 Project Mercury tracking stations got together on their world-girdling radio network for a post-flight critique.

The Kauai, Hawaii, station said Carpenter sounded tired and his voice was weak as he flew over.

"He was quite concerned about his capsule attitude and therefore, on several occasions, when Capcom (the capsule communicator) tried to get him on his retro-sequency, he kept returning to what he was doing."

"We told him to get ready for the retro-sequency and he started doing something else. There was some confusion whether he understood what the order was."

"We had the impression that he was very confused about what was going on. But it was very difficult to assess whether he was confused or preoccupied."

The Woomera, Australia, station came in to say, "We also felt the astronaut was acting somewhat tired on the last pass." It said his voice was weak.

When he was asked to comment later on the critique, the medical expert who monitored Carpenter's flight said the astronaut obviously tired. But, Dr. Stanley T. White said, Carpenter performed his task "in an appropriate manner."

His theory was that the tracking stations thought Carpenter was confused because he was too busy—too preoccupied—at times to make the requested responses.

At Grand Turk, the psychiatrist who talked to Carpenter after he came back to earth said he didn't even think the astronaut was tired during the trip.

Plan Formed to Take in 6000 Chinese

WASHINGTON (AP)—Rep. Francis E. Walter, D-Pa., has put before Congress an administration-backed measure that would open U.S. immigration gates to some 6,000 Chinese refugees now in Hong Kong.

Secretary of State Dean Rusk said he supports the bill submitted Thursday by the Pennsylvania congressman, an author of the basic immigration law and chairman of a House subcommittee on immigration.

It was described as a plan agreed upon by administration and congressional immigration leaders to ease refugee pressure on Hong Kong, already jammed with escapees from Red China. Thousands of the refugees are being sent back across the border.

President Kennedy already has ordered several thousand refugees admitted to this country under provisions of existing law. These measures were invoked earlier to admit Hungarian and Cuban refugees.

Walter's bill wouldn't bring to the United States any of the refugees who have flooded across the Red Chinese border in recent days, but officials here said it would help ease overcrowding in the colony by admitting some Chinese who were there before.

The regular U.S. immigration quota allowed only 105 Chinese a year to come to the United States. It will take more paper work to determine the exact number of Chinese who would qualify for entry under the Walter bill, but estimates put the figure at 3,000.

Russia Urges Talks for Laos Peace

By STANLEY JOHNSON

MOSCOW (AP)—Soviet Premier Khrushchev pledged today to continue efforts to establish a neutral coalition government in Laos.

Khrushchev told a nationwide radio and television audience that the Soviet government "did stick to and will stick to the positions it expressed at the Geneva conference on Laos and in my talks with President Kennedy on the future of Laos."

Reading a prepared text with the aid of steel-rimmed glasses, Khrushchev reported on his just-concluded trip to Bulgaria. He praised the cordiality of the Bulgarians and said they had shown they were "devoted and sincere friends, marching along with the Soviet people to the victory of communism."

Khrushchev was seated at a Kremlin table as he spoke. It was obvious the Soviet leader wanted maximum impact of his fireside chat on his Laos pledge.

Britain and the United States, through their ambassadors here, have been urging the Soviet Union to make a public statement to this effect. They began requesting it after pro-Communist Laotian forces captured the government-held town of Nam Than in north Laos.

Khrushchev called that military success a "reply to the provocations of the reactionaries," who he said, were aided and abetted by the United States.

He warned that all such provocations were "doomed to failure." Khrushchev rejected Western charges that the Soviet Union was responsible for the deteriorating situation in Laos.

Before winding up his talk, Khrushchev charged that "the decision of the United States to land troops in Thailand has created serious difficulties for a settlement in Laos," but he made no belligerent comments on the situation.

Khrushchev praised Prince Souvanna Phouma, the man both East and West have decided should head a neutralist regime in Laos, for continuing to try to form a government.

Khrushchev then made his pledge to continue Soviet support for formation of such a government, which he said was in accord with "the just aspirations of the Laotian people."

Fete Draws Many Public Figures Here

Friday was a notable day for Hope as it hosted simultaneously U.S. Secretary of Commerce Luther H. Hodges; Sen. J. W. Fulbright, chairman of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee; Rep. Oren Harris, chairman of the House Committee on Commerce; and Gov. Orval Faubus.

But there were other notables at the state level. In tow was Dr. Dale Alford, congressman, who is now a candidate for governor; Bruce Bennett, candidate for attorney general; and Nancy (Mrs. "Crip") Hall, secretary of state, who is a candidate for state treasurer; Kelly Bryant, candidate for secretary of state and Sen. Olen Hendrix.

Firm Wants to Issue Debentures

LITTLE ROCK (AP)—Texas Gas Transmission Co. of Owensboro, Ky., asked the Public Service Commission today for authority to issue $40 million worth of 20-year debentures.

The company, which operates in Arkansas and eight other states, said it plans to use $29 million to construct new pipelines and the remainder to repay bank loans.

Texas Gas facilities in Arkansas are in Ashley, Chicot, Phillips and Desha counties.

None of the new construction will be in Arkansas.

Administration Has Aided U.S. Economy, Secy. Hodges Says

Memorial Day, Designated a Holiday in the U. S., Is No Time for a Celebration

By MARY ANITA LASETER

We call it Memorial Day because we commemorate our men and women who died in wars. We call it Decoration Day because we decorate their graves with flags and flowers and because our brave departed ones deserve more than all the decorations we could give.

Although a holiday, it is no time for celebration. It is the occasion to bow our heads and pray. They bravely died, so we must bravely live. How did this occasion begin?

This observance of the memory of those who laid themselves between our country and her foes?

The Battle of Shiloh made it necessary for both armies to move thousands of the wounded men to Columbus, Miss., where many died. About 1,500 of them were buried in the hallowed ground known as "Friendship Cemetery."

It was appropriately named, for it was there that "Decoration Day" was first observed on April 25, 1865.

Early in the spring of that year, three young women, accompanied by a young Confederate widow, filled their arms with flowers each day and tended the graves of the Southern dead. Forty Union soldiers had also been buried there, and soon their graves began to look hard and forgotten.

The young widow then suggested that all graves be decorated. A few days later a strange procession wended its way to Friendship Cemetery. It was led by a young woman in white followed by older ladies who wore black, all carrying large bouquets of spring flowers.

When they reached the cemetery, they proceeded to decorate all graves regardless of army differences.

Next Wednesday, May 30 is Decoration Day or Memorial Day. It is observed throughout the land as one of our most solemn occasions. Though originally planned to commemorate the Civil War dead, it now embraces the fallen of all wars in which the United States participated.

Each drop of blood spilled from Bunker Hill to Iwo Jima is a deposit in the bank of our country. We need only look at the cemeteries of the world to realize the supreme sacrifice that was called for that we might be secure, or as nearly so as is possible in our world of today.

God has a destiny for us, for America, and only eyes of faith can read that destiny. With the example of those who have gone before us, may our minds, hearts, souls and bodies be strengthened for the task which lies ahead.

Business and Labor Never Agree Quietly

By JAMES MARLOW

WASHINGTON (AP)—It would be nice to think a bunch of labor and business leaders, meeting in an auditorium, could work out their problems amicably by the use of intelligence and sweet reasonableness.

That isn't the history of American labor-management relations. So it was no surprise, when President Kennedy called together 200 labor and management representatives this week to find answers for keeping the economy sound, that after two days they left without solving anything.

There's no reason to think that if they meet again they'll do any better. Nevertheless, Kennedy said he thought there was value in this first one and will have others.

It's possible a far smaller meeting might have accomplished more. Kennedy's permanent 21-man advisory committee—seven each from labor, management and the public—has made progress.

But this committee was confronted with specific problems, like automation and collective bargaining, and came up with recommendations. The 200-man meeting was supposed to discuss everything in the book.

Politicians Roasted by Attorneys

LITTLE ROCK (AP)—The Pulaski County Bar Association served roasted politician through song and verse at its biennial gridiron show here Thursday night.

Main target of the jibes was Gov. Orval E. Faubus and he was in the audience, laughing as hard as anyone.

Dale Alford, Kenneth Coffelt, Sid McMath and Marvin Melton, four of the six men who are opposing Faubus' fifth term bid, also got a share of the lampooning.

Bill S. Clark, portraying Faubus, opening his portion of the skit singing to the tune of "I've Grown Accustomed to Her Face."

"I've grown disgusted with this place, 'Oh, how I'd love a change of pace."

"This job was once sensational 'But now it's deadly dull—' 'It's such a bore 'Without Ashmore."

Harry S. Ashmore, former executive editor of the Arkansas Gazette, was hilariously critical of Faubus during the 1957 integration crisis.

After a procession of gubernatorial hopefuls, J. L. Kidd (as Faubus aide William J. Smith) stepped up and asked: "Now governor, see who would inherit this great state."

The Faubus character lamented: "I'm just a guy who can't say no."

"Easy to sway, I admit. 'When Bill tells me, 'Come on, let's go,' 'I always get up and git. 'When he tells me how to act and speak, 'I never can ignore the man's commands. 'Oh, but he's so strong and I'm so weak, 'I guess I'm just like putty in his hands, 'I'm just a guy who can't say no."

"Some people think I'm a saint, 'This isn't true, 'cause I ain't. 'I have one terrible taint— 'I can't say no."

Murder Is Finding in Estes Case

By JERRY PILLARD

FRANKLIN, Tex. (AP)—A pathologist's finding of probable murder in the year-old death of Henry Marshall, who investigated affairs of Billie Sol Estes, sent officers digging for clues to the slayer today.

This development occurred as a congressional committee prepared to open a hearing in Washington Monday on the operations of Estes, Peecos, Tex., promoter of multimillion-dollar farm enterprises who has been indicted on fraud and theft charges.

Dr. J. A. Jachimczyk of Houston, who studied the exhumed body of Marshall, made his final autopsy report Thursday to Dist. Judge John Barron.

The physician expressed belief that Marshall, shot five times with a .22 caliber bolt action rifle, was murdered but said, "There is the barest possibility of suicide."

Dr. Jachimczyk also said there was evidence Marshall's blood contained 30 per cent carbon monoxide at the time he died last June 3. Judge Barron said the pathologist estimated 35 to 40 per cent carbon monoxide—the gas in exhaust fumes from an automobile—could cause death.

The autopsy likewise disclosed a severe blow on Marshall's head. Dr. Jachimczyk said all five bullets entered from the front and came from a gun very close to the body. Dist. Atty. Bryan Russ had said earlier there was a possibility one shot hit Marshall's head.

Secretary of Commerce Luther H. Hodges last night stressed the present government program and the European Common Market as essential to the economy of the United States in an address at the annual Southwest District Poultry Festival. He spoke to a large audience.

Earlier in the day Secretary Hodges discussed the economic situation with businessmen at a Seminar and at one point called on Sen. William J. Fulbright to answer a question concerning foreign policy. At the seminar he defended the President's action in the steel case. Besides businessmen in the audience were Gov. Orval Faubus, Congressman Oren Harris and practically every state and district candidate.

Last night Mr. Hodges said America had made substantial progress toward strengthening the economy and advancing the well-being of citizens.

"There are many things that private citizens and their Government can — and must — do together, if this nation is to accelerate its economic growth," he said.

The Commerce Secretary cited the increase in gross national product and the increase in personal incomes to show that "President Kennedy has carried out his pledge that his administration would give priority to getting our economy moving again."

"This Administration is devoting special effort to strengthening and improving the economies in those persistent pockets of poverty which have not kept pace with the rest of the nation — those areas where the principal export has been their children."

Arkansas First

"Arkansas was the first state in the Union to have a project approved by the new Area Redevelopment Administration. This agency, which Senator Fulbright helped establish as a part of the Department of Commerce, is working to bring industry to depressed areas and jobs to displaced workers. As of mid-May, it had approved 172 projects — three of them in northern Arkansas — which will create in all 9,600 new jobs."

"The Manpower Development and Retraining Act of 1962 shortly will also begin to make a contribution — helping to equip displaced workers with new skills so they can compete both for vacant jobs that now exist and for new ones that will be created by any advancing economy. The act provides $435 million over the next three years to retrain an estimated 600,000 to one million workers."

"We have also been concerned with the need to promote the general expansion of business in all areas of the country. We are now offering key assistance in the fields of foreign trade, procurement, research and development. The president has asked for enactment of an investment tax credit as an incentive for modernization and expansion of private plant and equipment. Executive and legislative action on depreciation and tax reforms are also part of our program."

"The president has asked for standby authority to reduce individual taxes temporarily by up to five per cent when business begins to dip."

Reaction Was 'Thank God He's Back'

By RAY KOHN
Associated Press Staff Writer

"Thank God he's back." These few words summed up reaction to Malcolm Scott Carpenter's historic three-orbit journey—with a cliff-hanger ending which jolted everyone into prayerful suspense.

From blast-off through the orbits, and announcement of re-entry, general interest in the Navy lieutenant commander's flight seemed not as great as that of Marine Lt. Col. John H. Glenn Jr., the first U.S. astronaut to circle the globe in a space ship. It was mainly regarded with a feeling of quiet satisfaction.

Then the bombshell announcement. His capsule overshoot the landing target area by 200 miles; radar lost him starting with re-entry; all radio contact was gone. For 41 agonizing minutes a nation was fearful and fearful.

"I'm afraid that boy burned up," a man in New York's Times Square muttered sadly.

Then the joyful announcement. "A plane spotted the capsule and a life raft 'with a gentleman named Carpenter'."

From coast to coast came sighs of relief and shouts of glee. Up went windows at Rockefeller Center, and out went showers of ticker tape celebrating the safe landing.

In a Dallas, Tex., restaurant a lady, after learning that Carpenter, 37, was safe, said: "If I'd only known it while I was trying to eat—I couldn't eat a bite."

A little girl in Atlanta spoke up proudly: "I knew he'd make it; he's an American."

Among the first of the honors to be heaped on Carpenter:

New York's Mayor Robert F. Wagner offered him a ticker tape parade.

President Kennedy personally telephoned his congratulations.

In Washington, D.C., interest had not been nearly as high as during Glenn's flight. But, typical of the emotion generated by Carpenter's safe sighting, two women burst into tears at the good news. In Nashville, Tenn. high school principal John Oliver said: "It was on everyone's mind so that at the Kiwanis Club we could hardly have a meeting. When he was found everybody burst into applause."

A plant manager in Nashville put it this way: "Suddenly everything became quiet as they announced Carpenter hadn't been sighted. We didn't realize how quiet until it was announced he had been sighted. Suddenly you could hear noise everywhere."

Former President Dwight D. Eisenhower said, "It's good news. I'm delighted he's back safely." Joan Landon of Williamsburg, Va., said of Carpenter: "I was afraid he was gone. I was afraid he hadn't come back to earth. I thought maybe he had just kept on going into the twilight zone."

Post Office Bids

WASHINGTON (AP)—Bids will be opened June 21 in Dallas for modernization and extension of the present Post Office building in Paragould, Ark., the General Services Administration said Thursday. Cost of the project, which will add 11,000 square feet to the building is estimated in excess of $500,000.

Applications Accepted

WASHINGTON (AP)—The Civil Service Commission has said applications for three Arkansas postmasterships will be accepted until June 19. The three openings are at Hackett and Hartford in Sebastian County and at Parkdale in Ashley County. The annual salary for each job is $4,975.

foredoomed them to no agreement so did the fact that they had to deal with generalities instead of specifics.

Perhaps if they had been called in the midst of crisis, like war, when they had no time for the luxury of old-fashioned labor-management bickering, they would have done better.

The only two labor-management conferences in history which really reached important, basic agreements were called in wartime, in World Wars I and II.

The overwhelming lesson of labor-management relations in American history shows this:

The one way for these ancient rivals to keep the government out of interfering with their business long ago, and repeatedly, would have been to reach compromise agreements beneficial to both, with both yielding something.

But they didn't. They had to be hit on the head with a government club.

For instance, employers through most of American history fought the attempts of their workers to organize into unions which could bargain for all of them.

It was to the benefit of the employers to keep the employees weak by keeping them divided.

Finally, the government had to step in and, through the 1935 Wagner Act, force them to bargain with unions.

Then, when Congress thought unions in turn were getting too powerful, it stepped in again and through the 1947 Taft-Hartley Act imposed new restrictions on both unions and employers.

It may seem astonishing to future generations that men of this time—in labor and business—couldn't get together and, for their own sake, by being reasonable do for themselves what government had to do for them.

If the time comes when labor and management do by themselves reach reasonable understandings it probably will not, so much the result of a new intelligence as fear that they had better be sensible or watch the government step in.

back. Marshall, 52, was found dead on his farm near here. As an investigator for the state Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Office, Marshall had checked cotton acreage allotments held by Estes. The Agriculture Department since has ruled that Estes held the allotments illegally.

The inquest verdict five days after Marshall's death was suicide.

Capt. Clint Peoples said he would call in every Texas Ranger necessary for the reopened investigation.

County grand jurors who began inquiring into Marshall's death four days ago recessed until Monday, when they hope to hear Dr. Jachimczyk and William Elliott of Temple, Tex., an Agriculture Department investigator. The grand jury will decide then whether to demand a complete file on Estes cotton allotments.

Texas Atty. Gen. Will Wilson said Thursday the Agriculture Department wants to produce only part of the file. A Justice Department said the aim is to keep secret details not relating to Marshall pending further investigation.

ordered the three ESD employees fired because they solicited campaign funds. One resigned, but two—Luke Arnett and Charles F. Wood—remain on the payroll and apparently will stay there. The deadline for dismissal was Thursday.

Faubus refused to fire Arnett and Wood and the federal government has said it will withhold $30,000, which is twice their salaries, from state ESD funds. The government can take no other action against them.

Faubus reiterated today he felt Arnett and Wood inadvertently violated the Hatch Act, which prohibits employees paid with federal money from taking active rolls in political campaigns.

ESD employees are under the act because they are paid with federal funds.

"The act allows federal employees to make contributions," Faubus said today. "They also can attend political meetings and express opinions, but they cannot actively participate in a campaign."

Faubus said his campaign organization will make no effort to contact anyone in the ESD this year. He said Arnett would not take part in his campaign.

However, he declined comment when asked if J. L. Bland, ESD administrator, would work at his headquarters. In past campaigns, Bland has resigned during the campaign period to work for Faubus.

A spokesman for the federal Civil Service Commission said Gov. Orval E. Faubus, who must decide which course the state will take, will be given several more days in which to make up his mind before final disposal of the case.

Originally the deadline set by Commissioner Examiner Andrew Goodhope in his May 2 order to Faubus was May 23, but later was reset for Thursday, May 24.

Should Faubus take no action, the commission is expected to direct the Labor Department to withhold the funds, the spokesman said.

The commission reaches its decision concerning Wood and Arnett Jan. 15 and Faubus was given 30 days in which to act.

No action was taken by the governor and on May 2 the commission set the latest deadline.

On March 5, Faubus said the pair would remain on the payroll, part of which is paid by the state and part by the federal government.

Little Rock Radio Station Has Been Sold

LITTLE ROCK (AP)—LIN Broadcasting Co. of Nashville, Tenn., has bought the Little Rock radio station KTHS, a 50,000-watt, clear channel outlet for $1,620,000.

The contract has been submitted to the Federal Communications Commission and approval of the transfer is expected to take at least 90 days, said Frederic Gregg Jr., president of the Nashville firm.

The Arkansas corporation, KAAV, Inc., has been formed to become the owner of KTHS. The station will be moved from the building it now shares with television station KTHV.

Gregg will be president of the new station, as he is of WMAK at Nashville and Waky, Louisville, and KEEL of Shreveport, the latter two recently purchased for $1.35 million and $800,000, respectively.

Gregg said the new station would operate 24 hours a day. It now operates 20.

The station was owned by Radio Broadcasting Inc., which is owned by the Ewing family of Shreveport, owner of the Times Publishing Co. of Shreveport. Radio Broadcasting company also owns 42 per cent of Arkansas Television Co., which operates KTHV. The Arkansas Democrat owns 32 per cent of KTHV.

Henry B. Clay of Shreveport, executive vice president of Radio Broadcasting, said the sale would have no effect on KTHV operation. Both stations now are managed by B. G. Robertson. They have a joint engineer and joint receptionists, but otherwise their staffs and equipment are separate.

KTHS and KTHV are both Columbia Broadcasting system affiliates.

Clay said his firm prefers to devote its full interest to television.

Casual shoes for summer wear take on a new chic in these styles by the famed Roman designer, Simonetta. Wicker print in gray with yellow (upper left) is used for shoe that's ideal for wear with pants. Another pants shoe is this one (upper right) in red-and-white textured cotton with vamp and bow in solid white. Blue-and-white stripe combines with solid white (lower left) in flat, sleek little shoe perfect for vacation wear. Solid black cotton shoe (lower right) has a little round heel, is trimmed in pale yellow. Your summer wardrobe should have at least one pair.

Should She Have Told?

By HELEN WORDEN ERSKINE

Dear Helen: My problem dates back 24 years when I was 16 and just beginning to date. Among the boys in our crowd was one older than the rest. We dated occasionally; a high school dance, church picnic or a movie, Sunday nights we'd all gather around the piano and sing old-time songs and hymns, then have refreshments. Mama was a whiz at baking pound cake.

Once or twice this boy would come early and help turn the ice cream freezer. I never thought of him as anything but a friend. Yet we did make love once. Why, I cannot tell you—on the impulse of the moment, I suppose.

Shortly after I met and married the most wonderful guy ever. I didn't tell him about the other fellow right off and that's where the trouble began. We had been married over a year when I realized what a terrible mistake I was making in not being entirely truthful so I told him the whole story.

Since then we've been through some of the most glorious and unhappy times a husband and wife ever experienced. Now we are at a parting of the ways. He has requested that when school is out, I leave—with or without the children. We have seven, three of whom are married and, believe me, he has been marvelous to them.

I still love him very much even though he doubts it. As for his feelings, I fear he is beyond caring and seeks peace and quiet far removed from the recriminations, nagging and quarrels that keep churning up along with the past. I am not trying to justify my actions or minimize the fact that I was terribly wrong in failing to confide in him all those long years ago. Do you think there is any hope of happiness from here on for us both—together when I didn't trust him at the start?

There are times when he looks at me, hates me for deceiving him and can't stand even to touch me! Is there any possible way to ease the hurt of someone you love? My husband has consented to read your answer and think over what you say. —Remorseful Wife.

Dear Remorseful: The seven children you bore your husband are strong evidence that he was not disturbed until fairly recently by your failure to tell all at the start.

To forgive you then and condemn you now is inconsistent. There must be another reason for his wish to separate; perhaps he is blaming you for whatever he may be doing now, or he could no longer feel the need of physical love.

At any rate, you are both wrong; he for refusal to bury the past; you, for a guilt complex. Few women who marry are virgins, few are the men who've not had previous romantic experience. To harp on the past is cruel, especially to the four children still dependent upon you two for love, protection and understanding.

Let affection for them reunite you. Given this common bond you can then hope for a more permanent marital relationship and the happiness you seek—together. See the past for what it is, a marriage. Now, is the accepted time!

Dear Helen: I'm all for you taking to the soap-box about the failure of parents to treat identical twins as separate entities. I have been an identical twin for 50 years. My twin sister and I were forced to dress alike, be in the same grade at school from kindergarten through high, belong to the same clubs, etc., etc., etc. We absolutely hated it.

In fact we almost hated each other and separated as much as possible when not at home. Our personalities were different but neither of us was permitted to express our true selves.

My grandchildren, a boy and girl, are twins. I pleaded with their mother not to treat them as carbon copies. Sensibly, she saw to it that they were not dressed alike, had different friends and, when in school, were placed in different classes. The girl was bossy, the boy shy. The separation drew the boy out until he became sunny and a person in his own right, not just a ghost of his overbearing sister. They know they are twins and play amicably together but each is an individual and developing as such. I'm sorry for the twins whose parents make show pieces of them. —A Twin.

Dear Helen: Our problem is my mother. We've waited four and a half years for her to shake off the spell a certain man has cast upon her. By "we" I mean not only my husband and I, but relatives and friends.

I've always been proud of my young, handsome mother. She used to be so full of fun, so understanding and warm-hearted. But, ever since she met this leech, all her good qualities are stifled until she is little more than a zombie.

Granted, she is divorced, free to choose whom she will and do as she pleases, but we hate to see her sell herself short. This so-called man is an alcoholic, a mother and a check-kiter.

There was a time when Dad felt sorry for him, as did we all, and gave him work. What did he do but raised his pay-check? Dad was too soft-hearted to prosecute though the sum involved was large. Is there any way to get our darling mother back to normal? —Disillusioned.

Dear Disillusioned: Your father should have acted when this rascal raised the check but that's water over the dam. Your mother has a right to live her own life, unless she asks your help, you had better steer clear of the whole, shabby business. Opposition will only make her more determined to stand by the weakling. Problems like this have a way of working themselves out. Given time, a man such as this one, will hang himself.

Sunrises and Sunsets Awe Carpenter

By JOHN BARBOUR

GRAND TURK ISLAND, Bahamas (AP)—"Boy, the sunrises and sunsets! They are more beautiful than anything I have seen on this earth."

With that small beginning, Navy Lt. Cmdr. Malcolm Scott Carpenter began to tell his story—the story of the second American space pilot to whirl around the earth.

The brain picking session begins in earnest today as Carpenter, his fellow astronauts and other Project Mercury officials try to dredge up every last detail of Thursday's flight.

The plan now is to finish the de-briefing in time to return Carpenter to Cape Canaveral Sunday. There he will face a news conference and a motorcade from Patrick Air Force Base through the town of Cocoa Beach and on to the missile launching site where he was blasted into space Thursday.

Carpenter spent Thursday night in the small hospital on the grounds of a U.S. Air Force auxiliary base on this British Island. With him were fellow astronauts, Marine Lt. Col. John H. Glenn Jr., the first American to orbit the earth, and Carpenter's back-up pilot, Navy Cmdr. Walter M. Schirra. Also on hand were flight surgeons Howard A. Miners and William K. Douglas.

How long they talked before Carpenter decided to go to bed wasn't known. But Carpenter did not show the fact that he had been up nearly 24 hours when he arrived Thursday night, his face beaming with satisfaction. Glenn was the first to the door of the Navy plane that brought Carpenter from the aircraft carrier Intrepid. He reached in, brushed Carpenter's cheek with his own and hugged the new space hero, a man who had been Glenn's own back-up pilot through the many delays of the first orbital flight, Feb. 20.

Then as he backed away to let others congratulate Carpenter, Glenn wiped a tear from his right eye.

Carpenter's health had been pronounced excellent after a quick look by doctors.

Asked if he had any anxious moments he was reported as saying:

"Yep, I had a few moments of anxiety near the retro fire (the firing of rockets to slow the spacecraft for reentry) over whether I was going to have enough fuel (to control the attitude of the space vehicle during reentry.)" factured goods totaled $50.7 million.

"Nearly one out of every three Arkansas farm workers is employed in producing for export. Arkansas' equivalent share of the country's 1960 agricultural exports totaled $171 million. Of this, $3.6 million was in poultry, for which West Germany is our best customer."

"A world trend toward protectionism would hurt our export industries and have an impact on jobs and profits here in Arkansas. 'If tariffs and other trade barriers are lowered — especially if we can prevent a high tariff wall being built around the European Common Market — we will have the opportunity for dramatic increases in exports.'"

In conclusion Secretary Hodges said, "But while we may not always agree on methods, I am confident we are all united in a common purpose: to build a better America. We have the good will and, I hope, the good sense, to work out democratically solutions to the difficult problems we face."

In Memoriam

They have not died in vain...those who paid with their lives the last full measure. Today, Memorial Day, is the day to remember Lexington, Gettysburg, Santiago Bay, Chateau Thierry, Coral Sea, Okinawa, Palermo, Normandy and Korea. We need only to look at the cemeteries of the world to realize the supreme sacrifice that was called for, that we might be secure. It called for the giving of life itself for many a man; for untold sorrow and heartache for friends and loved ones. As they bravely died, so we must bravely live. God has a destiny for us, for America, and only eyes of faith can read that destiny. Each drop of blood spilled from Bunker Hill to Iwo Jima, is a deposit in the bank of our country. One hundred sixty-five million Americans can do no less than dedicate ourselves anew. With our Alabaster Ointment of thankfulness, let us nobly remember those who laid themselves between our country and her foes. This is Memorial Day.

So They May See

Psalm 5

So They May Hear

GIVE EAR TO MY WORDS, O Lord, consider my meditation.

2. Harken unto the voice of my cry, my King, and my God: for unto thee will I pray.

3. My voice shalt thou hear in the morning, O Lord; in the morning will I direct my prayer unto thee, and will look up.

4. For thou art not a God that hath pleasure in wickedness: neither shall evil dwell with thee.

5. The foolish shall not stand in thy sight: thou hatest all workers of iniquity.

6. Thou shalt destroy them that speak leasing: the Lord will abhor the bloody and deceitful man.

7. But as for me, I will come into thy house in the multitude of thy mercy: and in thy fear will I worship toward thy holy temple.

LEAD ME, O LORD, in thy righteousness because of mine enemies; make thy way straight before my face.

9. For there is no faithfulness in their mouth; their inward part is very wickedness; their throat is an open sepulchre; they flatter with their tongue.

10. Destroy thou them, O God; let them fall by their own counsels; cast them out in the multitude of their transgressions; for they have rebelled against thee.

11. But let all those that put their trust in thee rejoice: let them ever shout for joy, because thou defendest them: let them also that love thy name be joyful in thee.

12. For thou, Lord, wilt bless the righteous; with favour wilt thou compass him as with a shield.
